A global ice delta begins to change its thermal environment, a new study finds. As temperatures increase, recent studies have shown that the ice delta over the eastern Antarctic Peninsula tends to expand the mass of the ice shelf due to cold, difficult to melt the ice. However, the study also found that the ice shelf may be shrinking due to the warming of the surrounding climate, which is leading to warmer temperatures and larger areas of melt.

The research, published in the Journal of Glaciology, is a large-scale field study of the ice shelf that covers ice shelf thickness measurements, which are then estimated from contemporary surface elevation measurements. By justifying past datasets with the 90th percentile ice shelf systems that surround a significant portion of the delta, the study also found that the ice shelf may be shrinking due to the warming of the surrounding climate, which is leading to warmer temperatures and larger areas of melt.

The three and a quarter lives of the Indian Union, as told by the Jatav, the Brahmin, and the Muslim respectively—with all its exasperations, wranglings, and conflicts—shaped human society from the very beginning. Of course, not all aspects of this are meant to be seen as a reason for celebration.

However, it is not surprising that protagonists of the different communities are suspicious of each other's intentions and motives. This is especially true when one considers the historical and cultural differences that exist between them.

That the government is not serious about the whole exercise of simultaneous elections is evident from the way the government is treating the issue of proportional representation. While the government has been discussing this issue for a long time, it has not made any real effort to implement it.

As the deadline for the upcoming elections approaches, it is clear that the government is not serious about this issue.

In my opinion, the current system of elections is flawed. It is a system that rewards the party with the most votes, regardless of the number of people it actually represents. This is not a fair system, and it is time that we moved towards a more equitable system.

In conclusion, I believe that the government should take the issue of proportional representation seriously and implement it as soon as possible. The current system is not working, and it is time that we moved towards a better system.’

Suresh, a 30-year-old lawyer, said, "I think the government is not serious about the whole exercise of simultaneous elections. They are just using it as a means to an end." He added, "They are using it as a way to keep the opposition parties divided and out of power."
